

JUDGE BOYER IN OPINION RULES IN J. OF P. CASE

Says That Cases Must Be Taken Before Nearest Justice

IF HE IS AVAILABLE

Opinion Sets Precedent in Bucks County, It Is Said

DOYLESTOWN, June 30.—Judge Calvin S. Boyer yesterday handed down an important opinion dealing with the jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace, the first of its kind ever to be before the county court for decision.

The opinion was handed down in the case of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania against Rev. E. H. Musselman, pastor of the church of the Penitente Brethren in Christ, Quakertown, an appeal from a summary conviction heard before Justice of the Peace LeRoy Waters, of Revere.

Judge Boyer ruled that the defendant, Rev. Musselman, who was charged with reckless driving, be discharged. The Court ruled that Justice of the Peace Stever, who lived considerable distance from the place where the alleged offense took place, had no jurisdiction in that he was not the nearest available magistrate as required by law.

Rev. Musselman, after being arrested, waived a hearing and appealed the case to the county court.

"The defendant offered evidence proving conclusively that the Justice of the Peace before whom the information was lodged, resided ten or twelve miles from the scene of the alleged violation of the vehicle code," Judge Boyer's opinion cites, "and that there were a number of other Justices of the Peace who resided much nearer, one of them being within a mile of the scene of the collision."

"The plaintiff offered no evidence to show that the Justices of the Peace who resided nearer than the one before whom the charge was preferred were not 'available.'"

"The evident purpose of the Act is to protect the defendant against any arbitrary selection of a Justice of the Peace at a point far remote from the scene of the accident, thereby putting the defendant to unnecessary inconvenience, and if it appears that the prosecutor did select a remote Justice of the Peace for the purpose of bringing his prosecution, and where it appears that there were nearer Justices, he should be required to justify his action by showing that the nearer Justices were not available. We conclude, that the burden was on the prosecutor or Commonwealth in this case to show that the nearer Justices were not available."

"We know of no case in Bucks county in which the question as to the jurisdiction of a Justice of the Peace to hear and determine a prosecution under the Vehicle code of 1929 where such Justice of the Peace is not the nearest available magistrate, has been raised."

"However, the question has been before other courts and we are entirely in accord with those decisions, and without further discussion of the question, have reached the conclusions in this case."

POST AND GATTY OFF FOR CANADA TODAY

Start on 1900-Mile Jaunt on Next to Last Leg of Journey

RECORD-SMASHING TRIP

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, June 30.—(INS)—Their tired bodies slightly rested and their frayed nerves relieved by four hours sleep, Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, American around-the-world fliers, hopped off at 3.20 a. m., local time, today, on a 1900-mile jaunt to Edmonton, Canada, on what they expected to be the next to the last leg of their record-smashing globe circumnavigation.

Their trim plane, "Winnie Mae," which carried them safely over the Atlantic and the dangerous Arctic passages from Asia to North America, thoroughly reconditioned byaskan Airway mechanics and looking "like new," was in good shape for the "dash" back to Roosevelt Field, N. Y., where they started their flight a week ago today.

The heavily-laden plane just barely made the take-off safely. The tanks of the plane had been filled with 300 gallons of gasoline, sufficient to carry the fliers 700 miles beyond Edmonton.

The first attempt to take off was a failure. The plane was taxied back and a fresh start made. The plane lifted just as the end of the field was reached but failed to gain altitude.

Post and Gatty expect to reach Edmonton at 5 p. m. today, spend the night there, and hop off early the next morning for New York. They stated there was a possibility they would break their flight to New York by stopping at Cleveland, Ohio.

The worst portion of the hop today will be 800 miles of bad mountain flying from the New York boundary to Fort Nelson, B. C. This area is practically uninhabited and without communication facilities. No report was obtainable as to weather conditions in that section. However, the fliers will have the advantage in encountering this part of their trip when they are comparatively fresh and at a time of day when conditions are most favorable.

Prom Fort Nelson to Edmonton excellent flying conditions will be obtained.

WHEN WORK IS PLAY

There is a lesson for grown-up men and women in that felicity of childhood to make play out of work. Many adults can recall when the "a-bringing home of the cows" was made the occasion for a buffalo stampede and the real wild west and lasso sort of cow punching, and the fun which made play of the harvest labor, and the snow house and snow man which made walk shoveling great sport, as well as the many play games that came to raking the leaves, running errands, beating rugs. Was there anything men call work which those same men as boys could not have made a rip-snorting good game of?

Making play of work is the real secret of happiness. Happiness is never attained through slaving to-day in the anticipation of being able, financially, to play tomorrow. The man who takes a pleasure in his work—makes play of it—is enjoying life in its full. He does not need to depend upon financial independence for his happiness. He is the man or woman whom the world has always mistaken for the inspired genius because "love of work," "ambitions" and "aspiration" are terms foreign to a world finding in work nothing but "toil," "slavery," "labor," "struggle" and "drudgery," and working for nothing but "response," "relaxation," and a perpetual holiday.

Love of work is possible either in digging ditches or sculpturing eternal marble, but good work is only possible from men and women who make play of their work. To the eye and ear it seems paradoxical, but the mind has long conceived that human beings who make play of their work play less at their work.

FIGURES MAY BE MISLEADING

There is no reason why the facts in regard to unemployment should not be made known and there is every reason why they should be. But in a hasty survey there is possibility of obtaining data that is seriously misleading and publication of which may have unfortunate consequences. So care in the making of the proposed national unemployment survey in connection with the Federal census next year is quite as essential as the survey itself. To be useful the survey must be accurate.

Census enumerators obtain their information by visiting homes. Obviously there is opportunity here for misunderstanding and error. There might even be confusion of the meaning of unemployment. There are many seasonal occupations and persons engaged in them are always unemployed during certain periods of the year. There are many who neither toil nor spin and who consequently should not be enrolled among those who are out of work.

The forms used in making the survey should be carefully prepared to overcome the possibilities of error cited above. But there remains in spite of these precautions, the probability of mistakes being made.

Under the circumstances the census figures on employment conditions will have to be carefully scrutinized and analyzed if the nation is to learn the true state of affairs.

The more undesirable a reputation, the harder it is to lose.

Travers Lorrimer, shell-shocked war veteran and son of wealthy Margaret Lorrimer, mistakes pretty Mary Lou Thurston for Delight Hartford, whom he is supposed to have married in England. Mrs. Lorrimer induces Mary Lou to assume the role of Delight, of whom no trace can be found. Travers is told he must begin again with friendship. His interest in life is renewed. No mention is made of his marriage until the visit of Larry Mitchell, Mary Lou's friend. Then Travers, believing Larry is in love with Mary Lou, reminds her she is his wife. At Christmas Mary Lou, irritated by Travers' lack of holiday spirit, terms him selfish. Brought to his senses, he joins his mother and Mary Lou in delivering gifts to the needy. At the Veterans' Hospital Travers meets his old buddy Jimmy McEwan, and plans to help him. Travers gives Mary Lou a sapphire ring and speaks of the seal ring he gave her. Mary Lou believes then that he really married Delight, using a seal ring. That night he kisses Mary Lou. Realizing she loves him and cannot go on pretending, Mary Lou plans to leave. Later she changes her mind. Mrs. Lorrimer remarks the change in Mary Lou to Dr. Matthews, who tells her he believes Mary Lou loves Travers.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

HE sighed, a little dispiritedly. "Oh, what a tangled web we weave," he began, half humorously, half gravely. "Don't say it!" she interrupted. "You're not usually so trite, Dan. It will all straighten out, I am convinced of it. And Travers is basically too sane to harbor a grudge against us long. The situation wasn't of our making, originally. Mary Lou came here quite innocently through the error of a newspaper advertisement. And Travers saw her. And what were we to do when he mistook her for someone else? I think he'll realize all that and also what she's done for him, when the times comes for him to know the truth."

In the Dark.

"We," Matthews reminded her, "do not know the truth ourselves. Until this other girl is found we won't know it. Even if we succeed in tracing the records of the alleged marriage, we won't know it until we learn beyond a shadow of a doubt that she is dead—or alive."

Mrs. Lorrimer had risen and was standing at the library window. It was almost tea hour and the slanting light of the sun shone in, as she pushed aside the draperies and looked out, and touched her white hair with a finger of pure, pale gold.

"They should be in soon," she murmured. Matthews lit a cigar and stretched himself more comfortably in the easy chair. He was happiest of all when alone with her, like this. He lived nearby and had reduced his practice to a very few old patients, having accumulated and inherited all the money he, a bachelor of no extravagant taste, would ever need.

He had many leisure hours and spent a great portion of them at Westwood. The remainder of his free time was given to his hobbies—the writing of a book which was to be called "Autobiography of a General Practitioner," and the raising of prize dahlias from seeds, the flowers of which he exhibited and the bulbs of which he sold.

"It's late," Mrs. Lorrimer remarked again and looked at the tiny diamond watch upon her wrist. "Where are they?" "And who are they, Margaret? You fuss over that boy far too much."

"Do I?—and I try so hard not to," she murmured. "They are Travers and Mary Lou, of course."

"Some day you'll get confused and call her that," he warned.

"No, I don't think so," she told him. "Sometimes I think that's the only way I can remind myself of the true situation by naming her—just to you. Larry Mitchell is here for the week-end and Jenny Wynne is out with the three of them—they are skating on Willow Pond."

"Mitchell is a nice youngster," commented Matthews.

"Yes—he's terribly smitten with Jenny, poor boy. She treats him outrageously—as she treats everyone."

Presently the four came back from the pond, cold and ruddy, trudging up to the house, the comfort of the hearth fire and tea, laughing all the way, their boots crunching in the hard, dry snow.

The sun was now at its setting, red and gold, a glory of celestial fire. Presently the sky would alter to that strange, chill green of winter and the evening star would bare like a silver lamp above the bare aspiring arms of the trees.

"Lovely," said Mary Lou — "lovely . . ."

Her voice broke a little. She had always loved beauty, it had an intimate message for her, but lately, it seemed, it broke her heart.

Larry, with whom she was walking, looked at her quickly.

"Steady on," he murmured, for, it seemed, no good reason.

It wasn't until he spoke that Mary Lou realized there were sudden tears in her eyes.

She blinked them away, and said, defensively.

"Well, it is lovely—"

Jenny broke into a little run.

"Golly! I'm frozen," she cried.

"Travers, you lazy lump, I'll race you to the house!"

She darted off, slim and straight in her skating suit of scarlet wool, kimmer trimmed. Mary Lou watched her flash along the path between the trees and Lorrimer after her. She remembered how she had raced with him—one day, it seemed very long ago, and yet was just before Christmas.

But since then he had kissed her, under the pale green and amber pearl of the mistletoe; since then she had come to her new wisdom.

Play Safe.

Larry said, low:

"You're crazy about him, aren't you? Don't be afraid of me, partner. We've always been friends. I understand, you know. You are aren't you?"

"Yes," she said, quite simply.

"What are you going to do, dear?" he asked her, anxious for her comprehending.

"I don't know. See the farce through. Play the game somehow."

"He's mad about you," Larry said.

"Not me, Delight. The girl he thinks me. Oh, Larry, it's such a miserable tangle!"

"What are you going to do?" he asked her again.

"Play safe! I suppose. Lean backwards." She managed a little brittle laugh, clear and mirthless.

"What else can I do?"

"I don't know. I'm—damned sorry," Larry told her, low. "He's a corker, and you've done wonders for him. Getting those kinks ironed out. Getting him back to normal. And what a normal! For before all this happened to him he was one magnificent youngster, Mary —Delight," he corrected himself. "I've been up to the hospital as he asked me to and seen McEwan, you know. Lorrimer's his god. It's amazing. The stories he told me—"

"Tell me, Larry!" she begged.

"Not now. Haven't the time. What about Mac anyway, is Lorrimer getting him out of there?"

"I think so. He and Mrs. Lorrimer have been pulling some wires and expect to send him to the Adirondacks in a few weeks' time," she answered. "It's been the best thing in the world for him—for Larry—to have that interest."

Larry caught her hand.

"Hurry—we've been mooching along and they've beaten us to the house," he said, straining his eyes for a scarlet skating suit.

"Jenny'll keep!" she laughed.

"Don't kid. This is the real thing," said Larry soberly.

"I know it is. I'm glad. Lucky you," she said, "and lucky Jenny!"

"I'm not so sure about that. She won't be serious. She's met me in town, you know, several times. Lunch, at some funny place. Dinner too, and a show. And I'm out here whenever I can sneak off. But she won't listen, she just laughs."

"That's Jenny's way," said Mary Lou, soothingly. "I wouldn't lose heart."

"Well," said Larry gloomily, it's all pretty much out of the question, after all, even if she did care anything about me, which she probably doesn't. That girl's like quicksilver! I can't ask her to live on the bountiful earning capacity of a rotten reporter, can I? And I wouldn't live on her money, so that's that. I've got to add to my income somehow. Writing a chapter a year of a novel or a scene every six months of a play won't help much. I will be 20 years, I'll be senile before I get one published and the other produced and even then they'll probably be flops, if they get that far," he prophesied drearily. "So I'll have to catch me some extra jobs if only to keep her in lunches. She has expensive tastes in food!"

"What kind of a job?" asked Mary Lou.

"Love's Uncertainty."

"Oh, I don't know. I've heard that I can do press agenting for some Spring show or other if I want. I'll look into it. Give her a hundred seed," said Larry irrepressibly, "every five bucks counts in this depleted exchequer!"

They had reached the house and went in. Lorrimer and Jenny were already there, standing by the fire, thawing themselves out. Peter had arrived with tea and Jenny and Doctor Matthews had started one of their interminable arguments. They were always arguing. And the doctor was getting the best of it. He had brought Jenny into this vale of tears and was not above reminding her constantly of the fact.

"Laggards!" cried Jenny in her clear voice as the other two entered.

Lorrimer glanced at them a brief moment. He had been reassured as to the state of Mitchell's affections, and had observed, for himself, Jenny's effect upon that usually volatile young man, but he was unreasonably uneasy in that time the best of it. He had brought Jenny into this vale of tears and was not above reminding her constantly of the fact.

AETNA-IZE

If there is one thing about our transportation service that we would stress above all others, it is that the trolley and bus service which we render is Dependable.

By Dependable we mean that the passenger may feel assured that he will be carried safely and conveniently to whatever his destination may be.

It is possible that occasionally a bus or a trolley may be a little off schedule. It would be strange, considering the congested condition of Mill Street, in Bristol, if the trolleys could be kept

Emilie Y. M. A. Gives

"Indies" A Beating

in the fourth, and three in their last turn at bat.

Warren Bruce led the "Farmers" with the stick by socking out four hits in five tries. Ben Praul had three out of five, one being a double and another a triple. Bert Avella was the losers' best with three straight hits, all singles.

The Independents were charged with six errors and all aided in the Emilie's nine scoring of runs. Emilie made fourteen safe blows.

"Bill" Hart toed the mound for the "Indies" and was hit hard and was very wild. During his stay on the hill, Hart was hit for ten safe blows and issued six passes. His mates made all their errors behind him and fourteen of the visitors' seventeen tallies came from his delivery. Romeo relieved him.

Turner Ashby hurled his second straight victory for the winners and allowed eight hits. He loosened up during the late stages of the game and enabled the "Indies" to score some runs. When the Independents scored their first tally in the second inning it meant the first run scored off Ashby after pitching ten scoreless frames.

D. Still's barehanded catch of Gaffney's short and low fly in the third inning which the fielder converted into an unassisted double-play was the fielding feature of the fray.

BEGINNING WEDNESDAY, JULY 1st — The Bristol Courier presents its Classified Advertising Section in an improved catalogued form which eliminates, for readers, the necessity of reading through an entire column of ads in order to find the ones in which they are interested. Through the systematic preparation of copy and improved indexing of ads under their proper classifications, the Classified Section of the Bristol Daily Courier is now offered as the utmost in service to readers and advertisers.

Readers can now go direct to the Article or Service they desire

You will find it an Amazingly Simple Time Saver!

The arrangements of "Group" headings—"Announcements," "Automotive," "Business Service," "Employment" and so on, enables readers to determine at a glance where the ads which interest them may be found. The groups of ads follow the same order as in the index and the numbers which appear before each heading in the index correspond with the numbers which will be found at the beginning of each new classification in the Classified Ad Section. The ads are in A-B-C order, the first word being the name of the article or service offered or wanted.

You'll Find It As Easy to Locate the Ads You Are Interested In As It Is to Find a Name in a Telephone Book!
